On the 12th of April, 1682, John Evelyn says: "I went this afternoon with several of the Royal Society to a supper, which was all dressed, both fish and flesh, in Monsieur Papin's digestors, by which the hardest bones of beef itself and mutton were made as soft as cheese, without water or other liquor, and with less than eight ounces of coals, producing an incredible quantity of gravy, and for the close of all a jelly made of the bones of beef—the best for clearness and good relish, and the most delicious that I had ever seen or tasted."

Evelyn says this method of cooking is described in Dr. Papin's book, published and dedicated to the Royal Seciety, of which he was a member. Can you tell me whether that book is still in existence, and, if so, where it can be had? LCCCLLUS.

Over Bridges WitRout Stopping. A NEW APPARATUS ON THE WESTPORT BRIDGE TRAINS MUST STOP FOR AN OPEN DRAW-RIDGE OR RUN INTO A SAND BANK.

A correspondent writing from Westport to the New Haven Evening Register says: For the first time in thirty years trains to-day ran over a drawbridge in this State without coming to a stop before doing so. It was the dreadful accident at Norwalk, a few miles below here, in 1853, that ied to the enactment of the law requiring trains to make the drawbridge stoppage under a heavy penalty. Forty-seven people perished in the Norwalk catastrophe, and the public feeling aroused by the horror was such that the Legislature hastened to pass a statute which would serve tened to pass a statute which would serve to prevent a repetition of such accidents in the future. This requirement has always been more severely felt as an inconvenience by the Consolidated road taan any other in the State, owing to the greater number of drawlridges on the line and to the conthe running time of their express trains.

The officials wanted to do away with the delay of the minutes or so entailed by the stoppages of the five drawbridges be-tween New York and New Haven, but made no move in this direction until there was brought to their attention an apparatus which they believe will obviate the necessity of these stoppages without les-sening the danger to trains. The work of sening the danger to trains. The work of applying one of these devices to the draw-bridge of this place was arranged to take place to-day, and this afternoon a party of railroad officials witnessed the first practical workings of the apparatus. The condition of the apparatus of the apparatus of the condition of the sening turned to his own advantage by the playful way in which he laid the blame on the General's bad Italian, while his whole bearing was so dignified and courteous that it did not seem strange he should charm the cal workings of the apparatus. The con-sent of the commissioners was necessary before making the experimental test, and if the results are as satisfactory to them as if the results are as satisfactory to them as they appeared to be they will probably content to a modification of the present law in the case of all bridges provided with the the unworthy device to which Claude lends the case of all bridges provided with the c safeguards attached to the one here.

The apparatus is partly electrical. A mile and a half from the bridge, on either side of it, there are attached to the side of the rails little buttons, which each train operates in passing. When these buttons are pressed they set to ringing a bell in each of the draw-tenders' shantles on the bridge, and thus give warning of the approach o the train. Not only this, but they "lock" the draw, so that it could not be swung off

From the shantles on the bridge run a network of wires, chains, and rods, by which the signals are moved. The furthest signal is 2,600 feet from the draw. Near the top of a pole, about the height of a telegraph-pole, is a cross section painted green. The wires connected with this, and controlled by the lever in the hands of the man controlled by the lever in the h on the draw, turn this signal so that it stands out at right angles with the pole when the draw is open. Eight hundred feet from the draw is the switch of the siding, which terminates in a bed of sand. Before the draw is opened this switch of the many sources of the siding, which terminates in a bed of sand. Before the draw is opened this switch of the siding, which terminates in a bed of sand. Address C. B. O. care of this office.

One drawback which the apparatus has, although this does not affect its utility as a measure of safety to passengers, is the longer time it will take to get the draw opened. The operation is so hedged about with mechanical safeguards that to swing the draw for the passage of a vessel will take, it is estimated, nearly half an hour. The vexation of spirit which this will cause to impatible the play and been decided on before I cannot tell, but shortly after the play was announced by that title.

AN ACTRESS ON ACTING.

Leaves from Lady Helen Faucit Mar-

It has been my happy lot to impersonate not a few ideal women—among them two of your own Greek favorites, Antigone and Iphigenia in Aulis; but Imogen has always occupied the largest place in my heart, and while she taxed my powers on the stage to the uttermost, she has always repaid me for the effort tenfold by the delight of being the means of placing a being in every way so noble before the eyes and hearts of my audiences, and of making them feel perhaps and think of her, and of him to whose genius we owe her, with something of my own reverence and love. Ah, how much finer a medium than all the pen can do for bringing home to the hearts of people what was in Shakspeare's mind when he drew his men and women is the "well-trod stage," with that living commentary which actor or actress capable in their art can give! How much has he left to be filled up by accent, by play of feature, by bearing, by action, by subtle shades of expression, in spired by the heart and striking home to the heart, by all those little movements and inflections of tone which come intuitively to the sympathetic artist, and which play as leave a part in producing the impression IBlackwood's Magazine. to the sympathetic artist, and which play so large a part in producing the impression left upon us by a living interpretation of the master-poet! To one accustomed like myself to such rescurees as these for bringing out the results of my studies of Shakspeare's women, it seems hopeless to endeasone the same impressions by ancy of manner that the imprission of age quickly wore off. The secret of his suc-cess we that he lifted the character and css was that he lifted the character and gave it the dignity and strength which it required to make Claude respected under circumstances so equivocal. This was especially conspicuous in a critical point early in the play (act ii.), where Claude passes himself off as a prince. Mr. Macreacy's manner became his dress. The slight confusion, when addressed by Colonel Damas in Italian, was so instantly translet his available. girlish fancy of one accustomed to be courted, yet whose heart was hitherto un-touched. He made the hero, indeed, one ity. Truth to say, unless dealt with poeti-Pauline drop down into very commonplace people—indeed, I have been surprised to see how commonplace. WHAT'S IN A NAME? The success of "The Lady of Lyons" had during the rehearsals been considered very doubtful. Its defects in a literary the draw, so that it could not be swung off if the operator tried. A strong current of electricity is thrown upon the first of the levers which operate the draw and make it too hot for any one to handle until after the train has passed.

SHAKSPEARIAN SPECTACLE.

"Cymbeliae" would be the despair of those getters-up of plays whose scenery is so claborate that they can give but one scene to every act. But, oh how refreshing to have your thoughts centred upon such human beings as Shakspeare drew, and painted simulations of reality in which the modern fashion takes delight! The eye is pleased, but what becomes of the heart and the imagination? People tell us that Shakspeare would, if he could, have availed himself of all the material resources of the costumer, seen-painter, and stage-manager, of which her is now so fresh pands. I wanter to the contract of t use is now so freely made. I venture to think not. He knew too well that if the eye be distracted by excess either of num-bers or of movement, or by a multiplicity of beautiful or picturesque objects, the actor must work at a disadvantage. He can neither gain nor keep that grasp of the minds and sympathies of the audience development. In fook, in bearing, in tone and accent, we must see the princess, tone and accent, we must see the princess, strong in the possession of fine and cultivated intelligence, and equal, through all ner womanly tenderness and by very reason of that tenderness, to any strain which may be put upon her fortified and endurance—one who, while she draws on all insensibly to admire her more than two years. Last week the invalid expressed a belief that she could be cured by prayer, and her friends accordingly took steps to hold a special prayer-meeting at the Ebert residence. At the appointed hour—2 o'clock last Tuesday—four members of her church assembled and engaged in earnest petitions for her recovery. Presently the sick woman showed signs of regaining strength, arose from her bed, dressed, and joined in supplication. Since then she is said to be slowly recovering. This is the second cure of this kind reported lately in this county. This one is regarded by the residents of the neighborhood as very remarkable.

"Colonel," said a man whe wanted to make out a genealogical tree—"Colonel, how can I become throughly acquainted with my family history?" "Simply by running for office," answered the Colonel,—The American Queen.

Mrs. Dovey, who has been running a boarding-house for the scouts who have been watching Forest county mysteries, was in the station, and she was burned to death. Colonel Hargar, an employe of the United Lines, was also badly if not fatally burned. A boy was seriously though not fatally injured. There were 1,000 barrels of oil in the tank, which, with the burning of the station and the property, makes the loss quite heavy—probably $50,000 in all.

Mourning Among the Monkeys. NEW YORK'S ONLY PITRECUS CUT OFF IN HIS EARLY YOUTH BY CONSUMPTION.

[New York World.] Mr. George Starr, manager of Bunnell's Museum, at Broadway and Eighth street, was seeing the last visitors out of the museum on Friday night, when a messenger announced that the huge Simian which has figured on the bill-board as the "Pithhas figured on the bill-board as the "Pith-ecus," or "Lion-Slayer," was dying. Call-ing the reporter of the World to follow him, Mr. Starr hurried down stairs where a man probably sixty years old was leaning on the rail in front of the care with an expression of deep of the cage with an expression of deep anxiety. "Poor Tom is dying," said the of the cage with an expression of the panxiety. "Poor Tom is dying," said the old man, as he stepped toward the cage to move the iron grating which divided the two compartments. Mr. Starr attempted to stop him, insisting that the monkeys would fight. "Fight!" said the old man. "What do you know about monkeys?" He then took away the grating, and the other monkeys walked solemnly towards the dying "Pitheens" and settled in a other monkeys walked solemnly towards the dying "Pithecus" and settled in a ring about him. Immediately afterwards "Boston" and two or three of the larger animals crawled on top of the lion-slayer, and stretching themselves out upon him began to lament his death with loud chatterings. "He's dead," said the old man. "Do you have many deaths among your monkeys?" the reporter inquired.

The old man started and said: "Don't make fun of these monkeys, especially not how, when Tom's funeral is just going on. Don't you know it's all a mistake thinking that monkeys can't talk. My opinion is that a long, long time ago some mother lost speare's women, it seems hopeless to endeator to convey the same impressions by mere words. The more a character has wound itself round the heart the more is this felt.

"THE LADY OF LYONS."

With little cost this play, which was to prove so wondrously successful, came forth to the world unassisted by any extraneous adjuncts, depending solely upon its own merits and the actors' interpretation of it. It must have been written with rare knowledge of what the stage requires, for not one word was cut out nor one scene resentation. The author was no doubt lucky in his interpreters. Mr. Macready, though in appearance far too old for Claude Meinotte, yet had a slight, clastic figure and so much buoyancy of manner that the imprission of age

My opinion is that a long, long time ago some mother lost that a long, long time ago some mother lost that a long, long time ago some mother lost that a long, long time ago some mother lost. I have seen Tom — they grew up and tell me anything I'd like to ask him. And them monkeys there are talking now. Poor Tom died of consumption. He caught cold, which settled on his lungs, and now he's dead. He was five years old, and was born in Africa. He was first brought over by Barnum, and I had for years old, and was born in Africa. He was first brought over by Barnum, and I had charge of him for four years. I liked him so much that when Bunnell bought bim I left Barnum and came here.
